NUMBER 45

KILLED AT HELPER, UTAH

John Perry Caught in Machinery and Instantly Crushed to Death.

The following account of the death of Mr. John Perry, was taken from an Utah paper. Mr. Perry is well known in Springfield, having married Miss Dora Trotter, of this place. He is also a brother-in-law of Mrs. J. W. Bush, of this place:

Mr. John Perry, a well known citizen and chief electrician of the D. & R. G. at Helper, Utah, was killed Tuesday morning about 10:30 a. m. while walking between two fly wheels in the D. & R. G. power house.

Just how Mr. Perry met death will never be known, but the supposition is that his clothes in some manner were caught by the key on one of the fly wheels, causing death almost instantly, as he was hurled to the floor. The belt being thrown causing the machinery to slow down attracted the attention of the employees, and a moment later the discovery of Mr. Perry's body lying on the floor. At once Dr. Shupansky was summoned, but too late as death was almost instantaneous.

Mr. Perry was a native of Kansas, coming west several years ago spending the last eight years in Carbon county, where he assumed the duties of chief electrician of the D. & R. G. service. For a short time he was employed by the Utah Fuel Co. at Castle Gate as chief electrician, where he also held the office of justice of the peace. The failure of the Rio Grande to secure a successful electrician for their Helper plant during Mr. Perry's stay in Castle Gate caused them to request his return to Helper, where he has operated their plant successfully without criticism.

Mr. Perry at the time of his death was clerk of the town board of Helper and also a deputy sheriff of Carbon county, which office he has faithfully filled.

A wife and a host of friends are left to mourn the loss of our departed friend.

Funeral services were held Thursday morning, after which the remains were placed on the train for Provo, where the Elks, of which he was a member, took charge of the burial. A special car of friends accompanied the body to Provo, stopping at Castle Gate for those who wished to accompany the remains to their last resting place.

Automobile Tour.

The reliability and economy run of the Louisville Automobile Club through Springfield last Friday proved to be very interesting to a large crowd which gathered on the street to see the speed wagons go through. From 9:30 o'clock until near noon the autos, their occupants dust covered but apparently enthusiastic, dashed on Main street and around the corner and were soon lost sight of in a cloud of dust. Twenty odd machines led by Mr. Scott Moore, the pilot, were in the contest. One of the contestants was Dr. Clark, well known to Springfield friends, driving a Maxwell. Mr. Gwin Marks rode with E. G. Reimers in a Reo. No accidents had marred the run to this place and the Louisville papers report that no serious accidents were suffered during the entire journey.

McElroy—Buzby.

Miss M. Rebecca McElroy and Mr. Nathan W. Buzby, of Philadelphia, were quietly married at the residence of Rev. J. A. Hogarty, pastor of St. Augustine's church, Wednesday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Hogarty in the presence of only a few relatives and close friends. A half hour later Mr. and Mrs. Buzby left for a bridal trip through the east, at the conclusion of which they will be at home in Philadelphia where Mr. Buzby is a prominent retail coal dealer. There were no attendants, although Messrs. I. H. Thurman and R. Y. McElroy stood with the bride and groom while the ceremony was being performed.

The bride is the youngest daughter of the late R. Y. McElroy, and is a member of an old and prominent Marion county family. The many charming graces with which she is endowed have greatly endeared her to many friends, and she will prove a welcome addition to social circles in her new home.—Lebanon Enterprise.

OBITUARY

Mrs. T. J. Nally, Mr. T. L. Fenwick
and Mr. Tom Williams Passed Away During The Past Week.

Died, at the home of her husband, Mrs. T. J. Nally, near Bardonia, Ky., Friday, October 8, 1909, Mrs. Sallie Nally, aged 63 years. The funeral services were conducted Sunday morning at St. Joseph's Church in Bardonia and the remains were interred in the St. Rose cemetery.

Mrs. Nally was a native of, and had spent most of her life in Washington county. Her maiden name was Spalding, she being a daughter of the late Franklin and Ellen Ryan Spalding. She was first married in 1864 to the late Henry Fenwick, and to this union twelve children were born, five of whom survive, Mrs. W. A. Smith, Mrs. S. A. Smith, Mrs. Ella Montgomery, and Messrs. Bert and Len Fenwick. One brother, Mr. Martin J. Spalding, and one sister, Mrs. Thos. Fenwick, both of Uniontown, Ky., also survive. Twelve years ago the deceased married Mr. Thos. J. Nally, one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of this county.

Mrs. Nally was given a thorough education in her youth, having graduated from Loretto Academy, where, for many years, her aunt was the Mother Superior.

She had been sick for a long time, but bore her suffering patiently and did not rebel when the final summons came. The family has the sympathy of a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Thomas L. Fenwick, formerly a citizen of this county, died at his home in Uniontown, Friday morning, at 10 o'clock, of typhoid, his death occurring just an hour and a half prior to the time of the death of his sister-in-law, Mrs. T. J. Nally. Mr. Fenwick was the son of the late Thos. V. Fenwick, and was 63 years old. In 1872 the deceased was married to Miss Abbie Spalding of Marion county. She, with nine children, survive the deceased. Mr. Will Fenwick, of this county, is a brother, and Mrs. Sue Mocky, of Louisville, a sister.

Mr. Tom Williams, a well-known young man of the McIntire neighborhood, died at the home of his father, Mr. John Williams, Monday, of consumption, and was buried at St. Rose yesterday morning. The deceased had lived in Louisville the latter years of his life but came home in August a sick man, and was unable to recover his health.

This makes the third grown child which Mr. John A. Williams has lost by death within a year.

PAINFUL INJURIES

Received by Wathen Simms When
He Fell From a Barn Roof
Last Week.—He is Now Improving.

Wathen Simms was severely hurt last week when he fell from the roof of a tobacco barn on the place of his grandfather, Mr. T. W. Simms. Mr. Simms at the time was painting the barn roof when in some manner he began to slip toward the eaves of the roof, probably having stepped on paint. He fell on the roof but managed to throw his body over so that if he should plunge to the ground he would not fall on his head. His efforts to save himself were fruitless and he fell a distance of thirty feet, alighting among stumps and stones. Upon examination it was discovered that he had broken his ankle and his nose. While the injuries are serious and painful it is nevertheless a matter of congratulation as well as of wonder that Mr. Simms was not fatally injured by the fall. He is rapidly improving.

You Should Be Interested.

The Louisville Herald is now conducting a voting contest whereby they will send twenty young ladies on a two months tour of Europe with all expenses paid. One of the prizes belongs to Springfield and can be won for its contestant with a little effort. There is no lady in the contest who would appreciate this trip more than Miss Katie Hertlein, and she is the winner if Springfield gets in and make her the winner. Ask Miss Hertlein how you can assist her.

ANNUAL REUNION

Of the Old Soldiers of Washington County Held Last Friday at Squire Hendren's.

The balmy weather of last Friday drew an immense crowd to the old soldiers reunion which was held in a grove on the place of "Squire Hendren" near Williamsburg. It is estimated that 1,200 or 1,500 gathered to pay honor to the old soldiers and to enjoy the spirit of good fellowship which prevailed. Veterans of the Mexican War and of the Federal and Confederate Armies of the Civil War and of the Spanish-American War were in attendance, all affiliating and each vying with the other to show his American citizenship.

At noon a fine dinner was served to all who were in attendance and after some patriotic music "Squire Hendren" made some preliminary remarks, the roll was called and then the speaking began. Patriotic addresses were made by Hon. J. W. Lewis, Rev. C. H. Bohannon, Hon. J. H. Graham and Rev. Simms. All of the addresses were filled with patriotism and were heartily appreciated by the large crowd.

A committee was appointed to set a time for meeting next year.

Purchases Farm.

Edward Baumeister, of Louisville, who is well known throughout Kentucky as "Cherokee Ed," has purchased from the Columbia Trust Company a fine farm near St. Mary. The deal by which he acquires the property was made in day or two ago. There are 530 acres in the farm. The land was originally known as the Hill and the Dalley places, and lies between St. Mary and Raywick. Mr. Baumeister is a young man whose wealth is said to be something like a quarter of a million, a good part of which is invested in a menagerie.

Among his trained animals are lions, tigers and monkeys, and everyone hereabouts is wondering if he is going to winter his animals on his new farm. Mr. Baumeister recently gained a great deal of notoriety by placing a wild west show on the road. He owned his railroad train and had gathered together a large number of Indians and cowboys all of whom were well trained. However, the weather was against him, and after two weeks on the road the show was sent back to Louisville. The venture, it was reported, cost the young man something like $50,000. Mr. Baumeister paid between $25,000 and $30,000 for the farm he has just purchased.—Lebanon Enterprise.

BURLEY SOCIETY

During Session of Board at Winchester Decided to Move to Lexington.

Winchester, Ky., Oct. 6.—The Burley Tobacco Society held a short session this morning and after passing resolutions of respect to the memory of Walter Sharp, of Bath county, a member of the district board who died suddenly last night, adjourned until this afternoon out of respect to his memory. At yesterday's session it was voted to change the headquarters of the society from this city to Lexington, but the vote was reconsidered. The entire session this afternoon was devoted to consideration of the question.

Various propositions were considered and rejected, but finally a vote was taken on the original proposition and by a vote of 23 to 8 it was decided to locate headquarters at Lexington. Considerable hard feeling was manifested.

Heirloom.

Judge W. E. Sealeman owns a very interesting heirloom, a counterpane which was made by his mother about a century ago. The Judge says that he has often heard his mother say that she not only wove the cotton from which she worked the counterpane, but that she also cultivated the cotton, gathered it, ginned it and carded it. It is marked with the initials of her maiden name, "L. M." Lucy McKay, showing that this interesting piece of handiwork was made before her marriage to Judge Sealeman's father, which occurred in 1828. The counterpane therefore must be at least 100 years old.

Judge Sealeman also owns his mother's old spinning wheel which she used long ago and on which the cotton used in the counterpane may have been spun. Of this, however, he is not certain. It is needless to say that both the counterpane and spinning wheel are priceless in the eyes of the Judge, as well as being a source of interest to his friends.

A Tie Game.

A very good game of football which resulted in a tie, the score being 5 to 5, was played at the High School grounds last Saturday between the eleven of the Springfield High School and the second team from St. Mary's College. The home boys had been to St. Mary's the preceding Saturday and had met defeat by a score of 11 to 0, so in this game they were out for revenge. Both teams played good football and the game was interesting throughout. The home boys scored a touchdown in the first half and St. Mary's in the second, neither side kicking goal. All of the home boys played well but probably the stars were ON'an, Ben Simms and McClellan.

The second team from the High School went to St. Mary's Saturday to play the third team of that place. The game resulted in a victory for St. Mary's by a score of 11 to 0.

...The Old Church...

I've been back to the country church I loved in days of yore,
I saw the horses hitched about the old familiar door,
And down the winding country ways where sweet the blossoms cling
I found the faith of childhood such a fair and fragrant thing.

The robin's breast was red against the baby-blue of sky,
The little winds were blessed balm, the bloom was on the rye,
And through its windows came the light that fell upon her face,
And silver came the song and sweet the piping of the quail.

And with it all the church of old—my mother worshipped there;
They led her to its altar as a bride so young and fair,
And through its windows came the light that fell upon her face,
When folded from the toil her hands and reached the resting place.

There may be other churches that are grander to the eye,
There may be organs pealing out to shake the earth and sky,
But Oh, to rest the soul, be sure no comfort do they bring
Like that in hymns that helped the heart the chair of old did sing.

I lingered in the morning light in that familiar place,
And seemed to hear the prayers of old and feel the tender grace,
I could not think of them away beyond the yearning heart,
For God is love and they are His, and we can never part.

And so I think of it to-day upon the city street,
The wind that ruffles up the grass where all the graves are sweet.
And, like a rose that will not fade, preserved by heavenly art,
The "old church" blooms and sweetens all the garden of my heart.

BUMPER CROPS

Commissioner Rankin Hands Out
Report Which Makes Farmers Feel Good.

Bumper crops and splendid weather have made rich acres of farm land in Kentucky a source of wealth and comfort during the summer and so far into the fall is the report of Commissioner of Agriculture M. C. Rankin. The late fall has enabled the farmers to house their crop, and the stock is free from diseases except the sheep and the farmers are working hand in hand to eradicate the scabies and lift the Federal quarantine. The report of Commissioner Rankin follows: In a number of counties there is much complaint of the dry weather, especially in this true in the Second District, which has retarded fall sowing greatly and caused a scarcity of water for stock. Indications are that the average acreage of wheat will be sown and there is little rain in the State, but its acreage will be on an average with past years. In the early part of the month there was considerable complaint of tobacco from "house burning." Especially was this true of the early cut tobacco, but during the latter part of the month tobacco has been curing satisfactorily. There is a great scarcity of hogs for meat for home consumption, and the price still continues to be very high. We have had no reports of existence of disease among hogs. The number of sheep in the state has been on the increase for sometime, and since the quarantine has been declared on sheep in this State many sheep raisers have shown a strong desire to aid in the lifting of the quarantine by the eradication of this disease by dipping their sheep. This quarantine will no doubt be lifted a county at a time, and it behooves every sheep raiser to go before his Fiscal Court and ask them to erect a public dipping tank and use all their available means to stamp out the disease in that county. Cattle show a slight decrease in numbers. Horses and mules continue to be high in price and hard to buy. The acreage of potatoes has been large and the yield is on an average, and the crop is of a good quality. The early planted crop seems to be slightly better than the later crop.

Mr. J. C. Ennor sold to George Ray, of Lebanon, one work mule for $100.

Mr. Sam Nally, who sold his farm to Mr. Ed Drago a few weeks ago, we learn expects to locate in Nelson county. We regret the removal of Mr. Nally and estimable family from our midst.

Squire Jim Mudd, of Louisville, was here last week on business.

Miss Alice Saneberry, who has been staying in Chicago, Ill., for some time past, is visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Mrs. Ben Haydon, of Dants Station, after spending several days with her daughter, Mrs. Manny Alvey, has returned home.

Mrs. Wat O'Bryan, of Forest View, was the recent guest of her sister, Mrs. Tom Blandford.

Mr. and Mrs. Bunch Brown, of Springfield, visited the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ciel Piles, last week.

Again the death angel hovered around the home of Mr. John Williams and took from them their eldest son, Thomas, aged about twenty-six. His death was due to consumption. This sad event occurred on last Monday.

Few young men here to make more friends and fewer enemies than Tom.

Mr. Williams has the sympathy of the entire community, as this is the third child he has lost within the past year. The funeral took place at St. Rose the following day, of which church he was a consistent member.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Fields died October 1.

FARM AND STOCK

Items of Interest to Farmers and Live Stock and Poultry Raisers.

The young trees set out this spring need care and water at this time. Look to them.

Success in the garden is largely a question of fertilizers liberally and judiciously used.

When trees are affected with peach yellow they should be exterminated, root and branch.

The vines should be cleared off the sweet potatoes as soon as practicable after the first killing frost.

If your chickens are not confined, be not surprised if Biddy walks up to the house some day with a nice increase in family.

Those hens with the best appetites and the full crop are usually the best layers, but they should not be permitted to get too fat.

Deep, rich soil, of an alluvial nature, soil which contains plenty of humus, is excellent for planting small fruits.

It goes without saying that every farmer should keep enough poultry to supply his own needs. Further than that it depends upon his convenience to market.

What is a good hen? One that lays 100 eggs a year is good. One that lays 200 is among the very best. The average farm hen probably lays 100 eggs a year.

No fruit should be allowed to go to waste as long as there is a possibility of making cider, vinegar and unfermented grape juice.

Our orchards are largely what we make them. Good cultivation, tender care and knowledge of conditions make for success in fruit growing.

In selecting your flock for next year's work, see that they are all in perfect condition, selling any which are not.

Teach those turkeys that they have no right to roost anywhere but at home and you will come nearer to finding all of them about Thanksgiving time.

The feeding and growing of little chicks is an art which everyone must learn before they can wish for success in poultry raising. However, it's worth the trouble.

Kerosene used as a paint, spray, or mixed with whitewash is one of the cheapest and best materials for killing insects in the poultry house. It kills wherever it touches.

One of America's most prominent nerve specialists, in discussing the nerve-racking, brain breaking habits of American business men and the often fatal mental and physical results, correlates with this significant statement: "In many cases the cultivation of back-tiding has restored shattered nerves and revolutionized the methods of large business enterprises."

Don't let any weeds go to seed in the garden, for they are making unnecessary work another year by allowing the seeds to multiply. Clean up the weeds and walk and burn all trash that might harbor insects.

One packer is authority for the statement that the cost of packing apples varies from seven cents per barrel where the trees are low, to 20 cents per barrel where the trees are large and limbs high.

An experienced sheep man gives the following method for docking lambs: Tie a cord tightly about the lamb's tail one inch from the body. With a pair of pruning shears clip off the tail just below the cord. Rub carbolized vaseline on the wound and remove the string at night.

There should be no idle land in a well managed garden. As soon as one crop has matured or passed its usefulness, the land should be thoroughly prepared, generally well manured, and a succession crop planted.

It is claimed that under the system of alternating clover and timothy with the potato crops, even without the use of barnyard manure, the land is gradually improving. So long as the clover crop is a success on such farms the system bids fair to prosper.

If lambs are suffering from diarrhoea give castor oil and follow with twelve drams of prepared chalk, one dram powdered ginger, and one dram of ludanum mixed.

Dipping is profitable. Always dip when the wool is short, as less dip is consumed and ticks will be more apt to leave the sheep's body. Commercial dips are good, but some farmers make their own with tobacco, sulphur and carbolic acid.

The use of a wide dropping board under the roosts, elevated about two and a half feet from the floor, keeps the floor of the house clean and allows more inside floor space for the fowls in bad weather when they must be confined.

Chickens do better when fed beef scraps occasionally. Obtain from your butcher scraps such as he ordinarily gives away or sells for dog meat, and chop them up fine, and later on, when you kill a beef, remember to save some parts for your poultry.

Blackhead in turkey is a bad form of bowel and liver disease combined. As a rule, it is caused by overfeeding. Too much grain, with not enough sharp grit to grind it, will usually bring in an attack of indigestion which soon turns to blackhead. Sometimes the head turns pale instead of black. The sick bird should be removed from the flock.

Ever get a mite on your hand or neck? Fun, isn't it? What do you think of hens that have ten thousand such pests crawling all over them? How can they help getting poor in flesh and all run down? Help the bidders out by cleaning the houses from top to bottom with some good lice-killer, and then dope the birds themselves thoroughly until the last one is gone.

Keeping poultry dry is of more importance than keeping them warm; if they are dry they will be comfortable. For this reason the hen house roof should be tight to exclude all rains. The same principle applies to the poultry grounds. They should be well drained and dry for health in summer and comfort in winter. The hen that must tramp in the water and mud in winter with wet and cold feet will not thrive and lay.

Take out all cockerels from the flock of pullets. Give these pullets the room that has been used by the cockerels and pullets. They are growing so rapidly, doubling in size in two months, that the pullets need twice the house space of two months ago. The cockerels will annoy the pullets and they will not mature in as good laying condition as if penned alone. Both cockerels and pullets mature the better for being raised apart, and the mating need not be made until two weeks before eggs are required for hatching.

The ripening of cream is caused by a certain class of bacteria, which usually get into the milk from the air. They are also transmitted from the churn and milk vessels. Also the proper ripening of cream depends upon the temperature upon which it is held. If the cream is held at two low a temperature the bacteria are held in check and hence cannot work normally. Often interfering species of bacteria get into the milk and cream and destroy the effect of those that cause proper cream ripening.

Don't keep turkeys penned while fattening. They resent it and sometimes lose their appetite. A turkey needs exercise and will not thrive long in close quarters. It is a good plan to have a house or shed, with removable roosts, for the turkeys to stay in at night. One side, or at least doors and windows, should be fitted with poultry netting to give ventilation. When the turkeys are to be caught, remove the roosts, as they interfere with the work. If turkeys get their will, they are sure to roost upon the highest trees or roof of a building.

Marion County.

(Enterprise and Falcon.)

Miss Ella Bourie and Ernest Mobley were married in this city Tuesday evening by Rev. A. C. Graves. The ceremony was performed at the residence of James Mobley, a brother of the groom, at nine o'clock, and was witnessed by only a few intimate friends. The groom is a son of John Mobley, of this county, and for sometime past has been engaged in the livery business at Springfield.

Mr. Joseph Hamilton, of West Louisville, a prominent young farmer, was united in marriage to Miss Annie Canary, of this city, Tuesday morning at St. Augustine's church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. V. E. A. Hogarty at 5 o'clock in the presence of a few friends of the happy couple. The attendants were Miss Elizabeth O'Neal and Mr. Thomas Canary, of Louisville. Immediately after the ceremony, the bridal party took the early train for Louisville, from which city they will go to Owensboro where many friends who wish them a long and happy life.

Mr. J. W. Spalding, of Louisville, and Miss Annie Francis Hamilton were united in wedlock at St. Augustine's church, this city, Wednesday morning, in the presence of many friends, by Father Hogarty. The attendants were Messrs. J. P. Kelly and Henry Hamilton. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin L. Spalding, and has a responsible position with the Bourbon Stock yards. His bride is the attractive daughter of Mrs. Francis Hamilton. The happy couple carry with them the best wishes of many friends.

Mr. George W. Grundy died at his home nine miles south of Lebanon Friday afternoon at 6 o'clock, having been in declining health for several months. Deceased was possibly the oldest man in Marion county, being 93 years of age, most of these years having been spent in the home where he died. The great love and respect in which he was held was shown by the immense gathering of friends and neighbors who attended the funeral. The procession that slowly wended its way from his home where the funeral services were conducted by Dr. A. S. Moffett, to the Old Liberty burial ground, was one of the longest ever seen in the community.

Laxative for Women Free

There is a great difference in the purposes to which a laxative should be put. Tablets and pills, salts, etc., are usually violent purgatives or cathartics, and altogether too powerful for the average person. A woman at all times needs only a mild laxative—in fact, none other is needed by anyone, weak or strong though they may be, for the object is simply to move the bowels, and if a gentle laxative will do it, what is the use of a violent one?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has earned a well-deserved reputation among women and children and old folks—people who must necessarily be careful of what they take. It is a liquid laxative tonic and adjuvant remedy before the American people, as it comes in both sizes, and all drug action make it an ideal remedy for women in constipation, torpid liver, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn and such the digestive complaints. Its use for a short time will remove the trouble entirely so that future medication will be unnecessary. Its tonic properties build up the stomach and intestinal muscles so that they act naturally again. That this is so is the experience of many heads of families. Mrs. E. E. Blackmore, of Williams, Cal., as Mrs. J. E. Blackmore, of that place, writes, the whole town seems to be using it.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 100 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Obituary.

In loving remembrance of our sweet, little babe, Rosa Belle Harmon, who died Sept. 26th, 1909, of brain fever. She was born Feb. 4th, 1909, and was seven months and twenty-six days old.

Once we had a little flower,
Little Rose so pure and white
Bloomed in early spring's bright day,
But in autumn took its flight.
Gone, and left us sad and lonely,
To a fairer land beyond the sky.
The land where flowers bloom forever,
That great land beyond the sky.

Home on earth is like home so more
Since no baby voice we hear,
Laughter, crowing through the day,
And the nights are long and drear.
With no baby hands to wake us
With their little prattle sweet,
When we sleep without our baby
We are almost bound to weep.

Six days and nights of silent suffering
Lay our little darling fair,
Days and nights of anxious waiting
And of constant, earnest prayer
That our darling would grow better,
But our waiting was in vain,
For each day she grew weaker
And the greater grew her pain.
Until God saw fit to take her,
At three o'clock on Sunday morn,
Just as one more day was dawning,
Was her little spirit borne
Back to Him who once had given
Her to us for just a while,
And who with open arms did take her
And left for us just one sweet smile.

We loved her, yes, we loved her,
And thought it more than we could bear,
But Heaven seems not far away,
Since our little one is there.

Pestiferous Tourists Are Forced to Hike Through Corn and Grain Fields to Escape Angry South Dakota Citizens.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Hobo hunting is becoming a favorite pastime and recreation for the residents of some of the towns of South Dakota.

At this time of the year thousands of hobos, drawn to the state with the great influx of honest harvest hands, spread all over the agricultural portion of the state and make themselves a general nuisance to the people, especially of the smaller towns, where there is little police protection. The tourists of the road are unusually bold and think nothing of virtually taking possession of freight trains entering the state and by sheer force of numbers intimidating train crews. It is nothing uncommon for as many as 100 hobos to ride on a single train coming into South Dakota, refusing to pay fare or to leave the train until they reach their destination.

They then take possession of shady nooks adjacent to the smaller towns and prove themselves a great annoyance to housewives by their frequent trips in search of "hand-outs." Convenient chicken coops also are raided by them at night, many residents of the outskirts of towns losing practically all their chickens at the hands of the tourists.

Patience sometimes ceases to be a virtue, and then the angry male residents of the towns set out on a hobo chase and clear their districts from the district. At Aberdeen recently 150 tramps were rounded up at one time and driven from the town.

One of the most exciting chases of the season took place at Lesterville, a small town in Yankton county. Party hobos gathered at that place and the citizens paid little attention to them until they had robbed several stores of small articles.

To meet the situation the Commercial club was called in special session to consider the matter, and after much discussion as to arresting the strangers and placing them upon a diet of bread and water it finally was decided to arm with heavy clubs all the legal voters of the precinct and start a hunt for the undesirable and drive them out of the community.

As soon as the word could be passed around town the forces were marshaled together and a forward movement commenced all along the line. The tramps needed little or no explanation of what was intended. Their scout evidently had carefully noted the unusual activity among the townspeople, and no sooner had the skirmishers appeared in the vicinity of the hobo retreat than the tramps emerged from their shady nooks and started on a dead run for cornfields surrounding the town.

So enthusiastic were the hunters and so exciting the sport that the chase was continued far into the surrounding country, and corn and grain fields for miles around were carefully traversed in the search for the human quarry. By nightfall there were no hobos within miles of Lesterville. During the hunt those who were unfortunate enough to come within reach of the hunters were severely beaten, and for many days will carry the marks inflicted by the heavy clubs in the hands of their pursuers.

The man hunt was so successful that it has been decided by the male residents of Lesterville to repeat it twice a week during the remainder of the season, or until all tramps have learned to give their town a wide berth. Other towns which are afflicted with the tramp nuisance may adopt similar stringent measures to rid the towns of the undesirables.

GASOLINE ENGINE FOR PLOW

Scarcity of Labor Causes Introduction of Innovation That May Revolutionize Farming.

Salina, Kan.—The first rain in Kansas will be a signal for farmers to begin plowing their ground for the next crop of wheat. The time will be short to prepare the ground for the seed, and the farmer who has a large tract of ground to sow will have to employ a number of men and teams, a feature of farm life which is at this time bordering on the impossible.

Owing to the scarcity of labor, Brice Muir, a farmer near this city, has equipped his farm with a gasoline engine and a six disk plow. This piece of machinery promises now to solve the labor problem and revolutionize the work of preparing wheat land in large tracts.

With this plow Mr. Muir can turn 15 to 20 acres of ground in a day of ten hours, at less expense than employing men and teams.

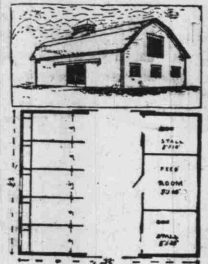

A gallon of gasoline to the acre and the time of one man is about the only expense.

Unique Pact Ends Strike. Washington.—The right of the laborer to quit work and of the employer to discharge an employee without advance notice is granted in an agreement reached after a 12 weeks' strike of carpenters and joiners in Nuremberg, Germany. This introduced a new rule in the German labor world, reports the American consul, G. N. Hart.

LITTLE STABLE FOR HORSES

Handy Small Barn That Will Accommodate Five Animals, Also Has Feed Room.

An illustration is given below of a handy little barn that will accommodate five horse in single stalls. It has two box stalls, also a 12-foot feed room. The hay loft will hold hay for seven or eight horses for quite a while. The structure is 26x32 feet square, 12 feet to the eaves and 16 to the peak. The hay loft is filled through the large door shown in the gable and feeding is done from above, through chutes, one for each stall. However, a hole may be left over driveway, for dropping hay down if you desire. The driveway is ample in size for gathering the manure, and for hauling in straw and bedding. The interior arrangement, makes it very easy to care for and feed the stock, also to keep the building clean. The walls are covered with 6-inch drop siding, and the roof with any of the prepared roofing felt. The ventilator is 325 feet square, and 3 feet high.

BUILDING SMALL COW BARN

Rough Sketch and Dimensions of a Stable That Will Comfortably House Five Animals.

A building 16 feet wide and 19 long will accommodate five cows, giving a little more than three feet to each cow, with a narrow passage at one end from the front to the rear without going out-of-doors, says Country Gentleman. The width would be divided according to the accompanying sketch, showing the layout of the stable. A represents the rear passage; B the manure gutter; C, standing platform 4 feet 8 inches to 5 feet 4 inches, according to size of cows; D, stall; E, manger; F, feeding passage. The stable will be more convenient if the two passages are made wider. Make the side walls seven feet high in the clear, with one-half pitch gable roof. Make a doorway at one end of each passage.

HOW TO AVOID HOG CHOLERA

Poor Food and Bad Care Causes the Disease—Practical Way of Preventing It.

Hog cholera is largely due to bad care and poor food. Give the hogs good grass pasture, with shade and an abundance of pure running water. A light feed of fresh millfeed slop may be given twice a day if the pasture is short. Mix one handful of salt with one peck of wood ashes and spread it on clean slop twice a week. In the west the following is given as a preventive to a herd of 50 half-grown hogs every other week when cholera is prevalent in the neighborhood: Turpentine, one-half pint; mix it in the water, give it every second week; Venetian red, one pound; mix it in the water every alternate week.

Cholera affects the bowels most, and swine plague most affects the lungs. Cholera in swine is very similar to typhoid fever in man. Dr. W. R. Niles of Iowa says: "To prevent hog cholera or swine plague, so manage your hogs as to prevent their coming in contact with other hogs. Keep them from all water save from deep wells, protect them from visits of strangers and dogs, and before introducing a new hog into a herd keep him quarantined for 30 days some distance from the herd. If the disease makes its appearance in the herd burn every dead hog at once remove the hogs to fresh grass pasture. Use disinfectants freely; whitewash pens, fences and troughs with hot lime. Mix two ounces of carbolic acid in each bucket of wash or wash the boots and clothing of attendant with hot water and plenty of soap."

Care of Twin Lambs.

In many cases ewes are not able to properly nourish twin or triplet lambs and the extra one must be removed and put upon other feed, it having been found in many instances very profitable to raise lambs upon cow's milk. The mutton produced from such sheep is said to be very high grade.

Colts Need Exercise.

The growing colts, especially the roadsters, should have a lot of exercise. They should under no circumstances be kept in the stables. They should have the run of a large yard or field. Draft colts do not need so much room in which to exercise, as they are less active.

A Misunderstanding

By WILLIAM AMORY

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

"But you are not listening," Helen Fairfax turned her eyes back to her lover with a murmured "Forgive me." They were earnest eyes, shining with a tremulous love-light, and she was a clever girl, with keen mind and keener intuition, and he had grown into the habit of talking to her freely of his life, his profession, in a way that surprised himself. But to-night her attention wandered. To-night of all nights! To-morrow he was to sum up his great case, surely a woman should share the self-denial of a man's destiny. Was Helen, after all, like other women—given to moods, absorbed in the subjective—when the veil was lifted? They had been engaged six months; each day had been a fuller revelation of her nature. Was this the nearer view? Ah, no—banish the thought. Helen was Helen—there was no more to be said.

He took up the lines of the argument of his case and stated them to her, clearly, concisely, as though she were a man. This time her eyes did not wander from his face; they deepened, their pupils growing larger as she gazed. How splendid he looked! How alert! How alive!

How could she keep at this wide distance? How incidental and how futile sounded all that rapid flow of words! When would he have done, that she might throw herself upon his breast?

"Don't you think so?" he asked her, suddenly.

"Oh, Harold, I did not hear what you were saying."

"Not hear what I was saying? Haven't you been following? I never needed your co-operation more, your

"Harold Was Alone with His Letter."

Intellectual sympathy more, than I do any other kind. I have been working on this case; you know what a notable case it is. You know, also, that the eyes of the legal world are upon me. My summing up to-morrow will be a crisis in the beginning of my career. Could you not follow me—help me by your sympathy—your interest?

He waited to see the flash of protest in her eyes, for some little while that she would thrust to cross his own. And there is something beside love. A strong woman should keep even love at bay when a man has work to do—no law him nor tempt him with it. I do not like to say it, sweetheart, but I love you—and the wounds of a friend are faithful. I am disappointed at your failure to sympathize with my work to-night."

"We have no right to be moody nor absent-minded, dear," he answered seriously, "where another's interests are involved. It is a sign of weakness. And there is something beside love. A strong woman should keep even love at bay when a man has work to do—no law him nor tempt him with it. I do not like to say it, sweetheart, but I love you—and the wounds of a friend are faithful. I am disappointed at your failure to sympathize with my work to-night."

Two big tears welled in her eyes, but she said no word. Had Harold Ford been a hero, a knight of chivalry, he would not have stooped in his quest until he had found the source of those two tears; he was, however, only a very busy man of to-day. Not that the two are altogether incompatible, but that the combination is rare, and Harold did not happen to be both in the fullest sense; furthermore, he was deeply absorbed in an immediate practical affair. It was striking enough, and time for him to leave her. Though he said no more, and his good-night salutation lacked nothing outwardly, there was a mental reservation which, to the psychic sense of Helen, robbed it of its fullest bliss. Even the "six o'clock to-morrow, dear," he repeated, as he went out the door. "Six o'clock to-morrow," she answered.

Did her voice quiver, or was it faint? He was conscious of saying to himself, as he passed down the steps: "Are all women alike, I wonder—after all—tears and moods?"

The following afternoon, in the gathering dusk, he mounted the steps again. His attitude had changed. The stress and irritation of an absorbing effort had given place to a beautiful reaction. He had won his case, and won it in so brilliant a way that his triumph was the smallest part of his achievement. Even the judge had said words to make a young lawyer's heart take courage. But what were the words, what was the triumph, what was anything, until he had shared it with Helen! He could see her in the gathering dusk, as he waited, her eyes glistening delight! He could hear her vibrant "Harold!" Poor child, had he been harsh last night? Ah, no, only impatient for a moment—and frank—to make her the utmost that she was capable of being. If he had unostentatiously flung her, he knew a potent balm to heal with, to make her rejoice. Why was the servant so eternally slow in opening the door? How long they were making him wait! He rang again.

"Tell Miss Fairfax I am here."
"Yes, sir." The servant stood silent and awkward.

Harold wanted to quicken him with a shove; what was the matter with the fellow? He walked into the library; the light was burning low; the servant followed him, and closed the door with an air of mystery that gave Harold a mingled shock of impatience and of fear.

"I was to give you this, sir, when you came," and the man held out a letter.

"Is Miss Fairfax not at home?"
"She is at home, sir."
"Then tell her at once that I am here."

"Yes, sir."

Harold was alone with his letter; he opened it and read:

It is midnight, you have gone, and yet it seems as though you are still here. Close to me that I can see your eyes and feel your touch—Harold, forgive me that I was more as I should have been this evening, but I was a coward. Dear, I have not well for many weeks and yesterday I saw a specialist. He told me I had a most serious difficulty, and that I must undergo a dangerous operation at once. If it would save my life, to-morrow is the day appointed. I implored him to wait, but he leaves town in a few days, and if I do not have it done to-morrow it could not be performed for two months, and that is too long to wait, he says, so there was no other way. To-morrow—our day—when you are to vindicate my pride and hope in me, the day we have waited for so long. There was but one impulse strong within me, almost overmastering—to fly to the shelter of your arms—to seek your sympathy. But how could I tell you when it might imperil your calm, your peace—undo all you have worked for—hamper your ascent, in which to-morrow will be a stepping stone? No. You must not know. Your heart is too tender, I am too much your own for you to stand up in court and plead for legal abstractions when I am lying under the knife. I half hoped you would make me tell you all my heart—but now I am glad you do not know. You will have no shadow on your way to-morrow, and when you receive this it will be all behind us; it will have been over seven hours, for the operation takes place at 11 o'clock. Good-night—good-by. I love you—it seems to me that I love you in a new way to-night. Harold—Harold—I must call you back and tell you, and feel your strength to make me strong; but no. I am your love—I must be brave. And then—why should I fear? God's in His heaven—

All's right with the world.

HELEN.
He crushed the letter in his hand, and reached the door with one bound, like an animal in chase. She was his own; his place was by her side; no man could keep him from her. As he opened the door he came face to face with her father.

"Harold, my dear fellow—"

"Let me go to her," and Harold tried to pass. Mr. Fairfax put his arm across the door.

"No, you must not, now; the doctors are with her; they will let me in one, not even me, and I am her father. Harold, my boy, we must be brave and stand by each other."

A withering quiet, like a blight, fell upon Harold. It seemed to paralyze his powers of motion and of speech. After a moment he heard himself saying, in a voice that sounded like a stranger's:

"What—do—do—do—the doctors—say?"

Mr. Fairfax looked at him pityingly, his own anguish stamped white upon his face.

"Don't lose heart, Harold," he said gravely. "We are hoping for the best, and McKenzie, the doctor who performed the operation, says the chances are in her favor."

Kite-Flying Contests.

In response to a demand of the times for athletics that lead to thinking, few sports can take rank with the kite flying. In the open fields the sportsman's every resource is in play while he struggles with the string controlling the big kite tugging at the other end. His thoughts, if he indulges in them, are concerned with immutable laws and lofty affairs of the universe. Kite-flying contests are the excitement of the hour in the eastern states. Not long since 127 boys of Greater New York entered for medals offered by the West Hudson Aero club, and other similar events have been heard from in which both boys and girls exercised ingenuity in kite invention and craft in managing their airships.

Wanted a Handout.

"I suppose," began the kind lady, before Mr. Husky Hasbeen got a chance to exercise his voice, "that you want to chop some wood in exchange for a square meal, don't you?"

"I'd like to oblige you, lady," replied the stout traveler, "but it's bin more'n 20 years since I done enny thing in a dat line."

"Well," said the k. l., "here's where you can practice till you get your hand in."

"Nothin' doin' lady," rejoined the hobo. "Wot I'm lookin' fer is a hand-out."

And the kind lady fell in a faint.

An Easy Prescription.

Once a well-known citizen of Chelsea named Carr tried to call Dr. Bean to a sick member of his family in the middle of the night. Mrs. Bean answered the night bell and called down the tube: "Who it is?" "It's Mr. Carr." "Well, take the next one," quoth the lady. "They run every few minutes."—Boston Globe.

More Than Enough is Too Much.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, remove your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. LICK'S FIRST LOVE AFFAIR

Future Millionaire Was Repulsed by Girl's Father Because of His Poverty.

There are many stories of the light or side of finance in which love affairs find a place. Perhaps none of these is more peculiar than the story of James Lick, a name famous all over the world through a monument to his memory, the great Lick observatory, in California. In the financial world the great city of San Francisco is a monument to Lick's luck—he foresaw the possibility of the great city of the Pacific slope, bought the land on which it now stands, and became a millionaire. Before that time the name of Lick was great in the musical world. Lick's piano—out of which he made the money which he invested in land—were manufactured by him. But on the poetic side of life—a world apart from such things as piano-making and mud-dating—the great Lick stands as a monument to Lick's love.

In early life James Lick sought the hand of a miller's daughter, but was repelled by the father on the ground that the young suitor did not possess a mill. Many years afterwards, when he had become one of the richest men in the states, he erected a large mill and adorned it like a palace. It was built of mahogany and costly woods, and erected solely as a memorial of his youthful attachment. His only pleasure was to contemplate this palatial mill and to gloat over the man who had spurned him for his poverty.

LADY PASSENGER'S LOG

She Wanted to Be Sure Just What the Wind Should Be

It was blowing rather hard, and there was a nasty sea on an hour and a half before the first breakfast. An officer of the ocean liner hurried along the passage between the staterooms, and a timid voice called to him.

"Oh, Mr. Officer, please stop."

He turned and saw a dear old lady with a wrapper thrown around her, peeping through her half-open door.

"Yes, madam," said the officer.

"Mr. Officer, please; would you call this a gale?" asked the old lady, anxiously.

"Oh! no, madam. There's not the least danger. I assure—"

"Well, is it half a gale?"

"Not even half a gale, and this is such an excellent sea boat that you needn't worry a bit," explained the officer.

"Well, what would you call it, please?" said the lady, staidly herself as the vessel rolled.

"Just a fresh nor'west breeze, madam, with a cross sea running. But, really, there's nothing to fear."

"Thank you so much. I just wanted to get it quite right in my diary, you know."

Empress Uses Typewriter.

It is related that in passing through her husband's library recently the attention of the empress of Russia was attracted to a peculiar-looking machine. On learning that it was a typewriter, and having it explained to her, she became interested and began to hit the keys. Now, it is said, she does a good deal of correspondence for the emperor.

It is further reported that Queen Alexandra of England, Queen Maude of Norway, the czarina and the queen of Portugal are all fond of using the typewriter in corresponding with their intimates.

It is probable that all of them put together do not use the machine as much as Carmen Silva, the queen of Rumania, who rattles her poems and stories on a typewriter.—St. Nicholas.

Treating Tree Wounds.

Plastic slate, that is to say, moldable slate, is a mixture formed by combining about one part of coal tar and four parts of slate dust and is recommended for covering large wounds in trees. This mass must be about the consistency of a not too thick glazier's putty, so that it can be rolled and rolled out in the hand. Slate dust can easily be made by crushing small pieces of slate. The mass sticks to wood, to metal, to stone, and in fact to everything that is not greasy and closes every opening airtight.—Scientific American.

Did as He Was Told.

Some years ago the Yankee schooner Sally Ann, under command of Capt. Spooner, was beating up the Connecticut river. Mr. Comstock, the mate, was at his station forward. According to his notion of things the schooner was getting a "leete" too near certain mud flats which lay along the harbor shore, so aft he went to the captain and with his hat cocked on one side said:

"Cap'n Spooner, you're getting a leete too close to them flats. Hadn't ye better go about?"

"The captain glared at him."

"Mr. Comstock, jest you go forward and tend to your part of the skuner. I'll tend to mine."

Mr. Comstock went forward in high goodgeon.

"Boys," he bellowed out, "see that ar mud hook's all clear for lettin' go!"

"Ay, ay, sir!"

"Let go, then!" he roared.

Down went the anchor, out rattled the chains, and like a flash the Sally Ann came luffing into the wind, and then brought up all standing. Mr. Comstock walked aft and touched his hat.

"Well, cap'n, my part of the skuner is to anchor."—Bluejacket.

The ABC and XYZ of ADVERTISING

A SERIES OF TEN TALKS ON ADVERTISING No. 2

written by Seymour Eaton of Philadelphia

Advertising and news are first cousins.

The railroad and the stage coach are grandchild and grandfather.

Four out of five advertisers still use stage coach methods. The agency that distributes news has the quickest, cheapest and most effective machinery for distributing advertising. That agency is the newspaper.

The man who passes your shop window is going somewhere. He is on some other errand. If you want to catch him when he is not in a hurry put your shop window in the newspaper; a few articles at a time. You can make a hundred and fifty thousand people look at this kind of window every day and with much better selling results than if that hundred thousand walked by your shop one by one.

I know a retail store in one of our large cities, a branch of an English house, which until the autumn of 1906 was managed by an Englishman; austere, conservative, dignified; a man who would have been shocked to see his shop advertised in an American newspaper. He had an exclusive trade and his net profits amounted to about $20,000 a year. This Englishman died. His assistant, an aggressive young American, took charge. He advertised; advertised continuously in the best local newspaper. Last year this exclusive shop made a net profit of over $80,000. Why? Simply because there are five hundred thousand well-to-do people in that city who never knew that this shop existed until they saw those advertisements in the newspaper; and the shop has an excellent street location, too.

This is a concrete case, the facts of which I personally know. The Englishman depended upon the quality of his goods and his beautifully crested stateroom and his attractive shop window and his perpendicular-backed dress-parade clerks; all of which were above criticism. The young American put the whole show into the newspaper; admission free.

Show me ten shops which advertise regularly in a daily newspaper and I will show you nine that are making money. The failure of the tenth is probably due to bad management of some sort.

Some people value goods by the price they pay; others by the shop in which they buy; others by the effect the goods have upon their neighbors. It is only the common workaday sensible people who value goods by the goods. If you want all four classes as customers it is your business as an advertiser to make the cap fit.
